Have you considered A Level German?

• Why German?

- Speaking a foreign language is a skill for life. It is useful for international travel, understanding other cultures and provides you with a competitive edge when it comes to career choices.
- Transferable skills. Linguists are confident communicators, can think logically and quickly and have a more global outlook. Learning German enhances your listening skills and memory.
- German is the no.1 foreign language sought by UK employers. Germany is the biggest economy in Europe and is the hotbed of engineering (think Siemens, BMW, Bosch...). German is the second most commonly used scientific language.
- Universities look more favourably upon those who have an A Level in MFL because such people are organised, can multi-task, express themselves verbally plus tend to be great problem-solvers. A Level German is a challenge and universities respect the hard work that students must put into their studies.
- Foreign language study leads to an appreciation of cultural diversity and tolerance towards others. As workforces are becoming more geographically mobile, linguists help to breakdown barriers and mistrust.
- Opportunities to work / study in Germany – numerous scholarships and exchange programmes are available.
- Access to a whole new world of art, music, philosophy, literature, cuisine and film!
